Pizza problem goes to council

By GORDON RADDUE

ALBANY — Appeals from both sides of the Chuck E. Cheese issue arrived in City Council on Thursday, just beating the deadline and putting the matter in the hands of the City Council.

The Planning Commission on April 6 approved by a 3-2 vote Pizza Time Inc.'s application for a permit to operate a Chuck E. Cheese restaurant on the site occupied for 25 years by Kirby's restaurant.

Approval, however, carried a number of provisions that Pizza Time Inc. director Dave Wheeler said would be difficult to live with.

Restrictions on the restaurant's operating hours and the number of game machines that would be allowed.

City officials expected to receive appeals from both Pizza Time and Kirby, and were quite surprised that the matter surfaced until the deadline.

An appeal in behalf of Kirby's restaurant was filed by Gary Ruwet, head waiter at the El Cerrito Station, part of the Kirby's complex.

Kirby's owner David Viale said the reason he did not make the appeal himself was because he is an Albany resident and thus is technically ineligible to file an appeal to the city of El Cerrito.

The City Council is expected to deal with the appeal on Monday, May 16, at a meeting scheduled for the City Hall council chambers but almost certain to be moved across the street to the fire station, as was the April 6 Planning Commission meeting.

About 200 people turned out for the latter, and judging from a show of hands by Kirby's supporters asked by Planning Commission chairwoman Stefanie Pfingstl, only three people were in Chuck E. Cheese's corner.

Should the City Council uphold the Kirby's appeal or Pizza Time decide it cannot operate under the conditions

To Disneyland— at long last

25 disabled students make a trip south

the principal said.

Returned from San Francisco International Airport for a weekend trip to Disneyland.

The junket fulfilled a long-sought wish, according to Principal Leo Spardone, one of the school staff members who accompanied the children.

Fund-raising for the venture was spearheaded by two Castro parents, Alan and Zondra Heredia, and special education aide Joanne Mink.

"They were trying for this before I got here two years ago," said Spardone. "We'd hoped to do it last year, but we weren't able to raise enough money. Instead of Disneyland, we had a camping trip to the Marin Headlands."

"The Heredias were so impressed by the way the camping trip went that they decided to lead a fund-raising drive for the trip to Disneyland," the principal added.

With the help of Mink, who chaired a benefit dance at Salesian High School for the cause, they were Does city need pension study?

An actuarial expert says 'no'

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — Plans for an exhaustive actuarial study that would test alternatives for Albany's failing pension system may be far more elaborate than necessary, according to an actuary who worked on two earlier pension studies for the city.

In addition, Albany might do well to hold off on any pension reforms pending the outcome of related court cases in Pasadena and Los Angeles, Bill Smith of the San Francisco actuarial firm Milliman and Robertson told the City Council Monday night. Those cases may go all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court, a process which could take several years.

Albany's Pension Advisory Committee, a group of local citizens who recently submitted a report based on seven months of scrutiny of the city's pension problems, have recommended the city commission a complex new actuarial study.

But Smith maintained that much of the committee's scheme would be extraneous as well as expensive, estimating that the series of studies they want would cost about $20,000.

"Since any change you can make is probably going to result in a big fight, you should concentrate on what will work," he said.

Smith told the council that he saw only one practical focus for a new actuarial study — the possibility of capping future cost-of-living increases in pension payments, which under

The Times Journal won two awards this month at the annual Contra Costa Press Club judging.

A second place for photo series went to photographer Karen Preuss for her story on ballet students getting ready for a performance.

City editor Roberta Alexander also received a second place award for her column on Mother's Day (she's against it).

The competition was open to all newspapers in Contra Costa County.

Albany toughens graduation rules

By CHARLES PELTON

ALBANY — Overruling the strong objections of the Albany Teachers' Association, the Board of Education voted unanimously to apply most of the new, tougher graduation requirements to next year's freshman class.

Mike Mirabella, expressing the viewpoint of the executive committee of the teachers' union, cautioned that the full impact of instituting the new requirements on Albany's corps of teachers still needed to be determined.

"I would have preferred that the board delay implementing the requirements at least until all cost factors are evaluated and all teachers are informed of the changes," he said.

Both the mathematics and science requirements for Albany's graduating seniors is slated to be increased from one to two years beginning with the class of 1987. Students will also face new one-year requirements in both fine and applied arts.

The board also strengthened the three year English requirement. New freshmen will have to complete either a fourth year of English or take a related year-long course from a department other than English which has been approved to enhance the student's "writing experience."

RUSD may add English, computers

By DON McCORMACK

RICHMOND Unified high school students may soon need more English and a computer course in order to graduate.

The school board Wednesday defined its position on graduation requirements for the state Legislature, which is now reviewing standards.

High school students now must take three years of English, one of math, one of science and three of social science (history and government). Under the proposal sent to the state, they would be required to take a mini-course (three weeks to a semester) in computer literacy, four years of English, two of math, two of science, and three of social science.

Foreign language and visual and performing arts would remain electives — possibly.

Several board members indicated they would press for tougher local standards than the ones they endorsed for the state.

Board President Katherine Lord, for example, favored a one-year arts requirement. And Trustee Frank Calton pushed for a minimum one year of algebra and one year of a language.

He called the state proposal the "easy way out," saying under the plan students could take any math course and avoid algebra.

The move to toughen requirements comes at a time when the district has, for financial reasons, cut the number of units needed to graduate.

Ron Kamb, principal of Richmond High School, said that in 1979 students needed 225 units to graduate. Now they need only 200.

The state proposal contains 100 units of required courses. The rest would be filled out by electives.

Food for thought

The year was 1922, and Tony Gatto was selling fruits and vegetables to his Albany neighbors. Gatto's Old Home Market was located in the 400 block of San Pablo Avenue.

Everest trek sends one home

Climber victim of blackouts

By PATRICK KEEFFE

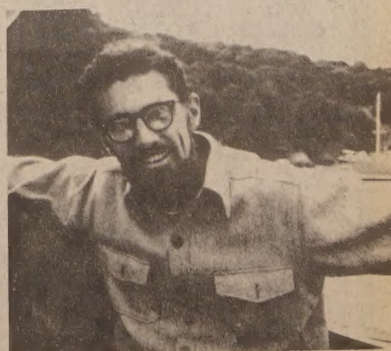

THREE East Bay men are key members of an American expedition that is making an unprecedented attempt to climb Mount Everest — without porters, by one of the hardest routes, and without oxygen.

Climber Harold Knutson, however, already has returned home, the victim of blackouts when he tried climbing higher than 20,000 feet. Knutson, 40, a geologist, lives in Oakland.

The other two are Berkeley's Galen Rowell, 42, climbing leader of the expedition; and Dr. Gordon "Gus" Benner, 45, also of Berkeley, the team physician.

"I was having acclimatization problems," Knutson said just after his return last week. "It's unusual because it wasn't pulmonary edema or headaches or nausea. Gus Benner wasn't sure what it was, so he had me go to the Stanford Medical Center when I got back, and they're trying to figure it out."

Graduating gets a bit harder

John Marlowe, Albany High's principal, presented a report to the board which outlined a relatively small cost to the district with no need for any teacher retraining even with the new requirements coming into force next September.

He emphasized, however, that that his analysis was based only upon a "barebones" approach, merely seeing "how this can work with what we now have" or meeting the board's mandate in the least disruptive way possible.

The board, however, was not interested in a minimalist approach, preferring to use the tougher graduation requirements as an opportunity to introduce new courses and innovation.

"I don't want this to be a requirement to fill in seat time," Dr. Gerald Brunetti, the board's president, said.

Other board members agreed: "I want to see some new course offerings," board member Peggy Thomson said. "I don't just want to see more of the same."

Extra sections of the courses which some pupils will now be required to take will come from both teacher time and classroom space freed by the dropping of some sections and of some elective courses. Presumably pupils will not now have the time to take as many of these courses.

Like the board, Marlowe also sees the need to initiate new courses to meet the new requirements. Many of these, however, may not be developed until 1984-85 academic year.

This is especially true for the new computer education requirement which the board decided not to implement until the class of 1988 enters in the fall of 1984.

"Our computer education now serves only 140 students," Marlowe said. The high school will need both to buy new equipment and train or hire teachers proficient in computer education.

In other business, Superintendent Stephen Goldstone announced that the district and the teachers' association had exchanged initial proposals affecting next year's contract.

The school district proposes that the contract with the teachers expire June 30, 1986 instead of the presently written 1985. "It's been a good contract," Goldstone said. "We've had few grievances and we'd prefer to keep it as it is a little longer."

The district is also seeking more flexibility with regard to class size. Currently the limit is 28 students for kindergarten to third grade and 29 for grades four to seven. This can only be exceeded by two pupils.

By rewording the contract to state that "the District will work towards adhering to the ... maximum class size," the administration hopes to avoid cases where a student is denied entry into a class solely because he or she is the third student (instead of the second) to exceed the targeted maximum.

The specifics of the teachers' proposals have yet to be spelled out. They have indicated, however, that they wish to reopen for negotiation those parts of the contract which deal with leaves of absence and with personal property damage.

The public will have an opportunity to comment on the contract at the May 3 board meeting, which will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Cornell School.

Also at its last meeting the board: • Announced that the district has applied for no fewer than 15 grants from outside sources to supplement its program. As of mid-April the district had won four and still had nine pending. Awards have totaled $18,820 thus far.

"With limited funds, grants are the best chance we have these days of doing something new and different to the school district," Assistant Superintendent Richard Rosenquist said.

"The grant applications cover all grades — pre-school through 12 — and all of Albany's schools. Six were computer related."

• Conformed with this year's changes in state law regarding the physical education requirement. Instead of a pupil being required to take four years of physical education, he or she must take only two years — one of which must be during the freshman year.

• Gave its consent to the City of Albany to explore the possibility of annexing Cougar Field, which lies adjacent to the high school.

• Approved the hiring of Roberta Christianson and Joanne Howley as instructional aids at Cornell.

imposed by the Planning Commission, Viale still would be faced with the problem of gaining a renewal of his lease.

The lease, which expires in June, was transferred to Pizza Time by Homart Development Co., owner of the Plaza.

Homart representative Ned Robinson told the Planning Commission that Chuck E. Cheese had a potential to increase sales revenue at the Plaza.

Robinson explained that 46 percent of people in the Plaza's trade area, which he said included Albany and Berkeley, was age 35 or younger. He said the Plaza currently was getting only 27 percent of the people in that age group.

A petition drive led by El Cerrito resident Kirsten Nelson produced 5,191 signatures of Plaza customers in support of Kirby's.

able to raise more than $13,000.

The biggest financial donations, according to Zondra Heredia, were the Independent Insurance Agents of West Contra Costa, the East Bay Community Foundation of Oakland and San Pablo Eagles Aerie No. 3028, each of whom pitched in $500.

The Richmond Policemen's Association and the El Cerrito Rotary Club came through with $150 each, and The Bear Claw bakery in Pinole collected about $300 in contributions from its customers, Heredia said.

There were numerous other contributions in the $50 and $25 range, and the raffling of a $1,700 pinball machine donated by Betson-Pacific of San Francisco, along with merchandise provided by the Oakland A's and San Francisco Giants, helped the fund drive zoom into the thousands of dollars.

The disabled students, mainstreamed into Castro since the closing of Cameron School for the Orthopedically Handicapped, will bit to raise money for a wheelchair "Roll-a-Rama."

The Heredias have three children of their own, who presently attend Castro. The program for another three students.

"This is going to be an experience for the kids," said before the trip. "A lot of them have never been out of town, let alone on an airplane."

Courts study pension case

Albany's system are tied to pay raises for active employees.

He estimated that such a cap would halve the city's future pension obligations, while other suggested alternatives would barely make a dent in the problem.

Regarding the two court cases, Smith said both test whether a city has the right to make changes in pension benefits for future years of service.

California law has established that cities cannot change benefits accrued to employees for past service, he said.

The cases now are in Superior Court in Southern California, and Smith predicted they would be consolidated and eventually reach the nation's highest court.

Robert Cheasty, the Pension Advisory Committee member in charge of drawing up the group's report, took issue with Smith's advice to narrow the scope of the request for a new actuarial study.

Cheasty said the plans drawn up by the committee represent a broad spectrum of ideas which should be tested, and asserted that restricting the study to merely an update of past actuarial studies would be "penny-wise and pound-foolish."

The Pension Board, which administers the city's pension program, already has agreed to commission a new actuarial study and will discuss what the study should cover at its regular monthly meeting Friday morning.

Albany's troubled pension system covers fire and police department employees hired before mid-1971; those hired since belong to the state-run Public Employees Retirement System.

The City Charter provides for funding the old plan by nine percent withholding from salaries matched by the same amount from the city. But as members of the plan retire and begin drawing benefits, the fund's assets have been shrinking while liabilities stretching several decades ahead have ballooned.

As a result, the city has been forced to make infusions into the plan from the general fund and other sources. Last year, the City Council levied a special tax to cover pension obligations for the current fiscal year.

The Pension Advisory Committee report laid primary blame for the pension system's problems on a 1969 Superior Court decision that tied pension payments to current salary scales rather than pensioners' salaries at the time of retirement. Under that ruling, inflationary increases in current salaries have generated corresponding increases in pension payments.

The committee recommended the city seek a "voluntary agreement" with beneficiaries to agree on cost-of-living increases, pension payments and agreeing to subsidize a program for another three students.

City officials were met again Monday that committee not come easily. Among them, representing the Police Officers' Association, was Council that the committee "does sound realistic" but look at it, but it may not be practice."

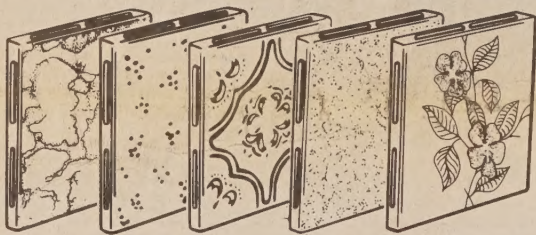

However, Clisshaw said beneficiaries don't want to be "unreasonable" about the system. "There's no room to talk about it," he said. "It may come down to what we say."

Robert Cheasty put it as for compromise, an alternative would be a "municipal reorganization in bankruptcy court."

Comparing Albany's pension situation to trying to plug a tub with no stopper, Cheasty said the necessary plug "even the most stubborn could be convinced to pension plan if beneficiaries such a cap."

Youth baseball: a lot of the action is off the field

El Cerrito group torn by strife, missing funds

By STEVE TADY

More than $11,000 in debt and plagued by constant bickering among board members and players' parents, El Cerrito Youth Baseball, Inc., could lose its status as a youth baseball league if an ongoing internal audit reveals that money has been mismanaged in a criminal manner.

"The fun is gone. I would just disband the whole league and forget the whole thing. You just can't fight like this and keep going," said Alan Paolini, ECYB board member.

Paolini has volunteered hundreds of hours of his time as a volunteer in the El Cerrito area since the league began.

"We've had wars before in this league. History is repeating itself. I personally have not been able to concentrate on baseball because of all the politics," he said.

The league's problems are vast and complicated, both financial and political. The financial problems are the most serious. If the audit turns up any significant wrongdoings, the league could lose its franchise.

The man who could revoke that franchise is Rudy Nelson, Northern California Director of Pony Baseball. Nelson has been attending ECYB meetings regularly. "The league definitely has problems. Being in debt isn't that unusual for a youth baseball league, but the way these people are running it, they aren't getting anything done," Fracisco says.

Paolini says to lose their franchise, the audit would have to find something very wrong.

The audit is necessary because the league is more than $11,000 in debt, a debt that has been carried for the last five years. The money went?" Sally Missaggia, the league's new financial officer and board member asked.

"I am considered the leak off this board. I know I am making a lot of people mad, but all I am trying to do is get this stuff straightened out so we can get out of debt and go on with baseball for the kids," she said.

Missaggia and her husband, Tiberio, organized the Committee for Responsible Administration of ECYB. The committee sent a letter to each parent in the league before an important membership meeting two weeks ago. It was attended by about 125 parents and interested parties.

The letter listed a series of "facts" and questions: The letter said that the group was required by state law to conduct an annual meeting or lose its status as a non-profit organization. In four years, no such meetings were held.

It also said that on Oct. 19, 1982, the directors had voted to have an external audit. On Jan. 18, 1983, the directors rescinded this vote.

The letter also said that no financial reports were submitted to the City of El Cerrito for two of the past five years as required by the city as co-sponsor of the league.

The letter charged that few receipts exist from last year's transactions and asks why more than $45,700 was spent on uniform costs for three of the past four years.

Perhaps the most explosive allegation states: "at least six official league checks were written by a board member in the member's own name. These checks were not board approved."

During the membership meeting, which was long and raucous, former board member Ken Rooney tried to raise the point of the checks: "I'm getting very upset here. I want to know who wrote those six checks and I want to know how much they were for and I want to know NOW!" Rooney belted out.

Eventually, financial officer Nelson said that she had been authorized to write the checks to cover uniform deposits, which were handed out in cash to parents at the end of last year. Rooney was told that all his questions would be answered by the audit.

Sometimes you dive for the ball, but it isn't there

Nelson appears to be at the heart of most of the financial questions.

"JoAnn Nelson is the hardest working person around here. I have seen her buy hot dogs with her own money and give them to kids that didn't have the money. There has been a lot of finger pointing going on around here and if I were JoAnn and Alan, I would get an attorney," Renee Smith, a five-year board member said.

"Paolini has been accused of stealing money. Last year, he would enforce something if he had to, but this year, instead of standing up and fighting, he is backing down. Instead of getting on with business, they are stirring up a bunch of s-t," she said.

The young catcher, at left, concentrates on returning the ball to the pitcher, while the batter at right is waiting his turn to get into the action.

Angry parents have been demanding to know how the league, a non-profit organization, can be so in debt. Paolini tried to explain why the league is so deep in debt. In 1977, he says, the league split from the El Cerrito Recreation Department and incurred a debt of about $5,000 learning to run the league with its own financial officers.

Over the next three years, the league ran relatively smoothly, adding a little more than $1,000 to the overall debt. Then last year, Paolini admits to a purchasing error in buying uniforms that cost the league $5,000.

"I wish someone had talked me out of it. We bought uniforms so that the kids could put their names on the back. But what we didn't realize was that the uniforms were not to be used again because we can't match the colors," he said.

The financial officer for ECYB over the last five years has been JoAnn Nelson. She has taken tremendous heat from some parents and board members, while others see her as hard-working and devoted, but overworked.

"There have been pretty much no records kept for the last two years. I can't believe it. There are no receipts, no documentation of anything. How do we know where any of ALBANY — Most people celebrate a birthday with a cake. Otowa Japanese Food celebrated its first birthday with a series of sushi workshops.

Capitalizing on the current popularity of the Japanese finger food, the grocery store at 1127 Solano Ave. offered classes in both basic sushi-making as well as the more advanced futomaki (thick rolls) and inari (stuffed fried tofu). All the classes were full.

At the "basic" class, instructor Sakiko Kono spent an hour demonstrating how to make kappa maki (cucumber roll), takuan maki (pickled radish roll), tekka maki (tuna roll) and una kyu (eel and cucumber roll). Her 10 students (ranging from teenagers to very experienced cooks) then washed their hands and practiced under Kono's watchful eye.

The most important step in making sushi, Kono explained, is the treatment of the rice.

"If the rice is not from a new crop, then it may be dry.

You may have to adjust the amounts of water," she said.

For her basic sushi recipe, she uses 3 cups of rice and 3 and 1/2 cups of water. The rice is then cooked over low heat, with the lid not removed.

The cooked rice is then spooned into a large bowl (called a hangiri). She reminded the class to smash the rice, but to handle it gently.

She mixed the rice with sushi vinegar, and the vinegar is made by combining 1 cup rice vinegar, 1/4 cup sugar and 1 tsp. salt.

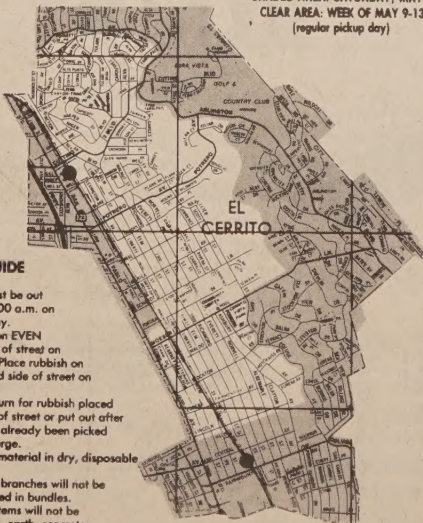

"It's important to use a wooden bowl instead of plastic because otherwise the rice gets too soggy when the vinegar is added," Kono explained.

She stirred the vinegar in with two wooden spoons. Because it is important to cool the mixture quickly, she used a fan, and suggested to the class that when sushi at home, it helps to have one person stir in the while a second one fans it.

Earlier, while the rice was cooking, Kono had English cucumber, pickled radish and fresh wasabi (unagi) into thin strips. The eel was canned, and anchovies. Frozen eel could also be used, she said. The first was dropped into boiling water.

She had also mixed some wasabi (powdered wasabi) into a thick paste, and turned the cup upside down to keep the wasabi from drying out.

For each sushi roll, Kono laid one sheet of seaweed on a small bamboo mat, wet her hands and laid a layer of seasoned rice on top. Next came a few wasabi, and several strips of whatever filling was used.

Using the mat, Kono then rolled the seaweed the filling, squeezing it gently to hold the ingredients together. Each completed tube was sliced, dipped in sauce and nibbled by the gratified class.

Hot luck with Olga Bier Morning goodies roll on the beach before breakfast is one way to work up an appetite. Another is to hike panting up a gentle slope and inhale deeply of the aromas coming from the bakeries on the avenue as they pervade the cool air. Freshly removed from the oven, crunchily with crackling sugar glazes, these hot breakfast treats will all will to remain in control of one's caloric intake.

The little inns don't help much, either, as they open dining rooms to offer their guests a morning snack of steaming coffee at tables set with colorful plates and bouquets of fresh petunias and geraniums. Even in Carmel is always in a honeymoon setting, no matter your age or reason for being there.

How to duplicate these moments at home does not seem to be a simple task. You can buy a hot water bottle, but if a bunch of flowers and a hot water bottle can conjure up some of that ambience, I'm sure you will have to deal with the floral aspects on your own. You will help with the baking. For starters, try this breakfast treat:

Crumble top coffee cake

1 egg
1/2 c. sugar
1/2 c. melted butter
1/2 c. sour cream
1/2 c. vanilla
1/2 c. all-purpose flour
1/2 c. baking powder
1/2 c. baking soda
1/2 t. salt
1/2 c. brown sugar
1/2 c. flour
1/2 c. cinnamon
1/2 c. soft butter
1/2 c. chopped walnuts or almonds
1/2 c. add sugar and butter. Cream until fluffy. Add egg, cream and vanilla. Add flour, baking powder, soda and salt. Add to mixture. Pour into greased 8-inch square pan. Mix topping ingredients and spread over the top. Bake 25 to 30 minutes.

If you have a bit more time and can wait for yeast to rise, here is a simple but tasty German cheese coffee cake:

Schmier kase kuchen

(Makes 2)

Combine and let stand in a warm place:

1/2 c. warm water
1/2 c. sugar
1/2 c. dry yeast
Pinch of ginger

In a large bowl, stir together:

1/2 c. warm water
1/2 c. sugar
1 c. flour
1/2 c. non-fat dried milk powder

Add the yeast mixture and beat well. Then add:

1 t. salt
4 t. soft butter
1 beaten egg
2 c. flour

Stir until the dough makes a ball. Turn it out on a well-floured board and knead thoroughly. Do not use more than about 1/2 c. of additional flour to make a non-sticky dough. Return to the bowl, brush top with soft butter, cover with a towel and let rise until double. Knead lightly and divide into two pieces. Pat each piece into a well-greased 9-inch round cake pan, forming a rim around the edge so that it is like a pie shell. Fill each with half of the following mixture:

1/2 c. sugar
2 t. flour
1 t. mace
2 t. grated lemon peel
2 c. cottage cheese
2 c. drained pineapple tid-bits

Sprinkle tops lightly with sugar and nutmeg. Cover and let rise in a warm place until light and puffy. Bake on center rack of preheated oven at 375 degrees. Bake 25 to 30 minutes or until filling is done. Serve warm in wedges with hot coffee and a kiss.

If you would rather not make two of the same kind of fillings, make only half of the cheese filling and make this filling for the second one. Well wrapped, this one will keep in the refrigerator for several days and when reheated will be another delicious breakfast treat.

Apple coffee cake

Into the pan with the patted dough, pour a little melted butter and brush it and the rim generously. Then sprinkle a fine layer of sugar which has been mixed with 1 T. cornstarch. If you have some cinnamon candies, crush enough to make 2 T. and sprinkle that in too.

Peel and cut several apples into wedges and press into the dough, sharp edges down in neat rows or concentric circles. Sprinkle over all with sugar and cinnamon, cover and let rise until very light. Cover with foil, taking care not to touch apples, or use another similar sized pan, inverted.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees and bake covered for about 20 minutes to steam cook the apples. Remove cover and continue baking until browned, increasing the heat to 375 degrees if necessary for about 10 minutes.

Ford dealer back in Albany

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — After a two-year hiatus, Ford is returning to Albany.

A new Ford dealership will open at 929 San Pablo Avenue in May, according to Gary Shipman, general manager of the Val Strough Volkswagen and Subaru outlets in Albany.

The dealership will be part of the Val Strough chain but will be called Albany Ford, Shipman said. It will occupy the former Subaru store, which was moved down the street next to Volkswagen several months ago.

The decision to open the new store reflects renewed confidence in the American auto industry after several years of flagging sales. "We think that it's on the rebound."

It also represents a new source of sales tax revenue and an "economic stimulant" for Albany, according to city Administrative Officer William Haden. The city receives just under one percent of the price of every car sold.

Of Val Strough's seven existing new car dealerships in the area, only one, Val Strough Chevrolet in Oakland, sells American cars.

Ford fans from Albany have had to travel to Oakland or Richmond for new cars or dealer service. A Ford dealership in Berkeley closed about a year and a half ago.

Albany's previous Ford dealership, also called Albany Ford, closed more than two years ago.

SUNOL NEEDS YOUR HELP . . .

Our little community of approximately nine hundred people has traditionally handled its own problems. We assessed ourselves to bring in city water lines; we passed our own school tax override; and we are presently working to purchase our own fire hydrants for Main Street. However, we DESPERATELY need your help on this one!!! The Alameda County Board of Supervisors (Excell, Bort and Cooper 3-2) recently approved a development of eighty-five half million dollar homes with OPEN sewage ponds (seventeen acres of "lagoons") atop the unstable Pleasanton Ridge behind our homes. This was done with the approval of our very own Supervisor Excell "to help solve the housing shortage," and with no regard for the community's outrage or plea to consider a twenty-home compromise on closed septic tanks.

Our only recourse is to ask the voters to support a referendum to suspend the ordinance via this petition. We have only a few weeks to collect 38,803 valid signatures of Alameda County registered voters. Please give us yours!!! and maybe your spouse and neighbors'. Then fill in and sign the bottom of the petition as the circulator (even if yours is the only signature in the body of the form) and return it as soon as possible to:

THE RIDGE REFERENDUM COMMITTEE

PETITION PROTESTING ADOPTION OF ORDINANCE

TO: Board of Supervisors of Alameda County

We, the undersigned, are duly registered and qualified voters of the County of Alameda, State of California, and constitute not less than 38,803 voters, or 10% (ten percent) of the entire vote cast within the County Alameda, State of California, for all candidates for Governor of the State of California at the last gubernatorial election held on November 2, 1982.

The undersigned hereby present this petition protesting the adoption of the following described ordinance on April 7, 1983:

ORDINANCE NUMBER 83-17.

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING CHAPTER 2 OF TITLE 8 OF THE ALAMEDA COUNTY ORDINANCE CODE RELATING TO ZONING, approving the application of the Sunol Development Company and Carl Nipper for reclassification from the A (Agricultural) District to the PD (Planned Development) District, to permit the development of 85 single family residences and two agricultural parcels of the 440 acre Nipper Ranch, 1510th Zoning Unit, on Pleasanton Ridge, north of Sunol, unincorporated Alameda County.

The undersigned hereby request that the ordinance be suspended and reconsidered by the Board, or be submitted to a special election, as prescribed by law.

Everest trek continues up the hard route

"I'm very fit. But my pulse rate is very low and I just wasn't getting enough oxygen. I'm very disappointed, but if I had stayed, I would have jeopardized the expedition."

Knutson said that two weeks ago the team already had made its fourth camp at 24,000 feet on the west ridge of Everest.

"The weather has been good and the climbers are in good spirits and health," he said. "I anticipate them topping out (at 29,028 feet) on about May 5. Depending on the weather, of course."

"With a high-altitude team under the stress of climbing and physiological problems, many times there's a breakdown of morale and rapport, but not in this case."

If the 16 climbers are successful, they'll set two world records: they'll be the first Americans to reach the top by one of its hardest routes and the first to do so without supplementary oxygen.

Climbing Everest without oxygen was accomplished first in 1978, by Europeans Reinhold Messner and Peter Habeler. But they went up by the southern route, which Galen Rowell said is the easiest way. The two were aided by a large team of oxygen-equipped porters. The two climbers took along supplementary oxygen, but didn't use it, he said.

And, in 1980, Messner did climb Everest, completely unaided, by himself.

Knutson said the team will make its last camp above 27,000 feet, return to a lower altitude to rest, then "make a push for the summit."

"Above that altitude, it takes about three days to make the summit. It's about all a body can stand, working without oxygen."

Four or five members of the team will go to the summit, Knutson said: Rowell, Steven McKinney and Kim Schmitz, both of Squaw Valley, Calif.; and John Roskelley and Kim Maumb, both of Spokane, Wash.

Not using porters means the team must carry their own gear, which also serves as conditioning. "They look forward to flexing their muscles," Knutson said. "But they don't like being automated. They carry their own loads at that altitude."

The weather way up there is also extreme, sometimes dipping down to 12 degrees, he said. When the wind comes up, temperatures can plunge.

Funding for the venture became an issue when ABC Television was refused permission to film portions of the climb. The network withdrew $200,000 of backing.

So, now that Knutson is back, he is working on funds for the climb, as is the American Alpine Club.

Opening lead: ♦J

By Oswald Jacoby and James Jacoby

Here we see the unlucky expert at what may well have been his unluckiest.

He sat South and pushed to a rather unsond grand slam after North's jump raise. Of course, he did use Blackwood to locate all the aces and kings, but he really needed to find out about the queen of spades.

As anyone can see, with spades breaking evenly there were an easy 13 tricks for any declarer. Now see if you can figure out how the unlucky expert managed to go down.

His downfall started when West made the rather silly opening of the jack of trumps. Not that West had any good opening, but most players would have decided that the jack of trumps should not be wasted on the opening lead.

The U.E. studied that lead for some time. Could it be a singleton? He decided that it wasn't. Could it be a fancy lead from Q-J doubleton? Possible, but not probable. Finally, he played low from dummy. East promptly put his queen on his partner's jack.

South won and led a small trump. Now West produced the deuce. Some five minutes later the U.E. decided that West's original trump holding had been J-10-2. He finessed and lost to East's 10. (NEWSPAPER ENTERPRISE ASSN.)
